Where Do We Begin?

Understanding Career Development Theory and Assessment

Career Development Theories:

Donn Brolin's 4 Stages of Career Development

Awareness

- Why people want to work; contributions to lifestyle and life choices

Exploration

- Job shadowing and trial work experiences to narrow career choices

Preparation

- Confirmation of one career field; refine interviewing and job seeking skills for work experience positions

Assimilation

- Participation in employee activities, to support satisfaction between career and worker

Career Development Today Is Rarely Linear

What Is a Transition Assessment?

An ongoing process of collecting information on a student's:

- Strengths, interests, preferences, skills, or aptitudes
- Needs related to current demands and future career, educational, personal, and social environments

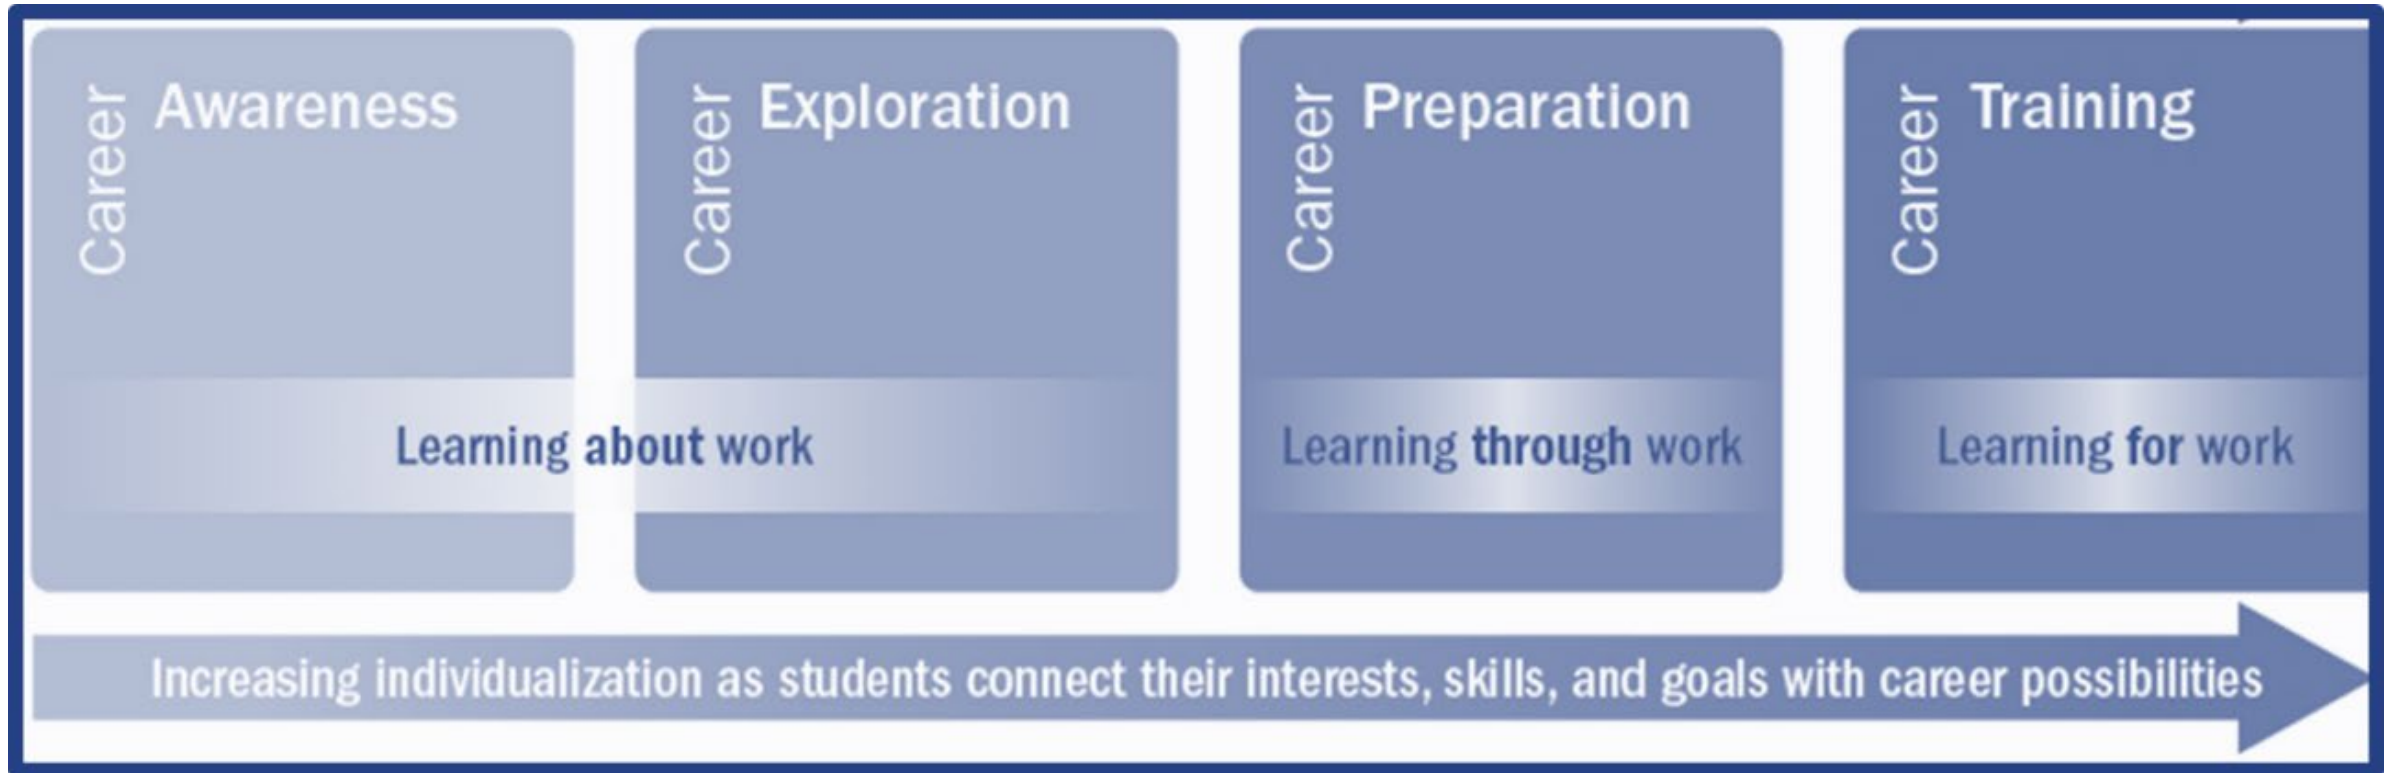

Provides a foundation for defining:

- IEP goals, transition services, and guides instructional decision-making

Transition Assessment

- Results from initial assessments should be the starting point for transition planning
- Transition assessments help students with disabilities identify the skills needed to achieve post-school goals
- Serves as a guide for students to make informed choices and take charge of their transition planning process

WBL Continuum

Why WBL Measures Matter

Students

- Reflect on learning from WBLEs
- Identify knowledge and skills gained
- Connect application to future career goals

Schools/Districts/States

- Use data to improve the quality of WBL experiences for all students

WBL Assessments

Prior to WBLE

- Interest inventories
- Student, parent, employer interview
- CDOS skill development levels (abilities and needs)
- IEP goals
- Input from team

During WBLE

- Employer feedback (frequency depends on student and job site)
- Student self assessment
- Job coach progress notes and on-site assessments (progress monitoring)
- Continual assessment of CDOS skill attainment
- Document hours and job tasks completed
- Consider needs for daily, weekly, monthly evaluations

At conclusion of WBLE

- Employability profile
- Student self-reflection
- Feedback to teacher, student, and IEP team
- Document hours on student transcript

Employability Skills

- Research indicates that youth demonstrating employability skills attain advantages related to finding, obtaining, performing in, retaining, and advancing a job or career (AIR, 2015; Lippman et al., 2015; Solberg et al., 2012).
- Lippman et al. (2015) examined the impact of specific employability skills and learned that youth demonstrating cultural sensitivity and learning orientation have greater success in employment.

Partner With WBL Professional Organizations

Work Experience Coordinators' Association (WECA) of New York State

- Members work collaboratively to engage students in relevant, “real world” learning opportunities ranging from career awareness to career exploration and career development
- WECA fosters collaboration among WBL coordinators across the state and provides the tools and support needed to successfully place students in work experiences

For resources to enhance or start your WBL program, visit the NYSED WECA page or the New York CTE Technical Assistance Center Work-Based Learning page.

Encourage School/Business Advisory Boards

- The establishment of business advisory boards is encouraged and supported by WECA
- Many states have business advisory boards, however, smaller, more regionally based boards can be very effective
- A true collaboration with businesses and schools requires central office administrative approval
- Originally these were established to support EOs with the development of CTE coursework/programs

Mutual Benefits of School/Business Advisory Boards

Benefits for Employers

- An opportunity for local businesses to give back to their community
- An opportunity for local businesses to develop relationships with other employers
- Access to future talent

Benefits for Schools

- Professionals share insight and experience with students and teachers
- WBLEs are an integral piece of EO's culture and expectations for students
- Increased understanding of employer/business needs

Role of the Job Coach

Who Can Provide Job Coaching Services?

- Teachers
- WBL coordinators
- Teacher assistants
- Agency job coach(es) contracted with the school

Responsibility of a Job Coach

- Provides specialized on- and off-site training to assist the employee with a disability in learning and performing the job and adjusting to the work environment
- Facilitate the job seeking process of people with disabilities to find paid employment in the open market
- Provide knowledge, networking contacts, encouragement, and resilience when seeking a job, accepting a job, and keeping a job
- When necessary, job coaches also can “carve out” or “customize” a job in a workplace; they find tasks at the site that can be successfully accomplished by the employee and create a new job out of these elements

Role of the Community

Responsibility of the Community

- Provide, or partner with adult services to provide, qualified trained staff to job coach as needed
- Provide transportation to vocational training sites
- Develop business/school partnerships by educating employers about the resources of potential employees to set up training sites
- Assist families in understanding the role of benefits and supports; offer information to learn about the impact work income will have on student's benefits
- Encourage families to maintain high expectations, including specifically that students can and will be employed

Community Services and Supports

Consider:

- What community services and supports are available that will support students in experiencing successful WBLEs in their community?
- Are community services an integral part of the transition planning process?
- How often are informal supports part of the transition planning process and part of the WBL planning process?
- What resources, services, and supports are missing that are critical to the success of young adults with disabilities in my community?

Students Potentially Eligible and Eligible for ACCES-VR

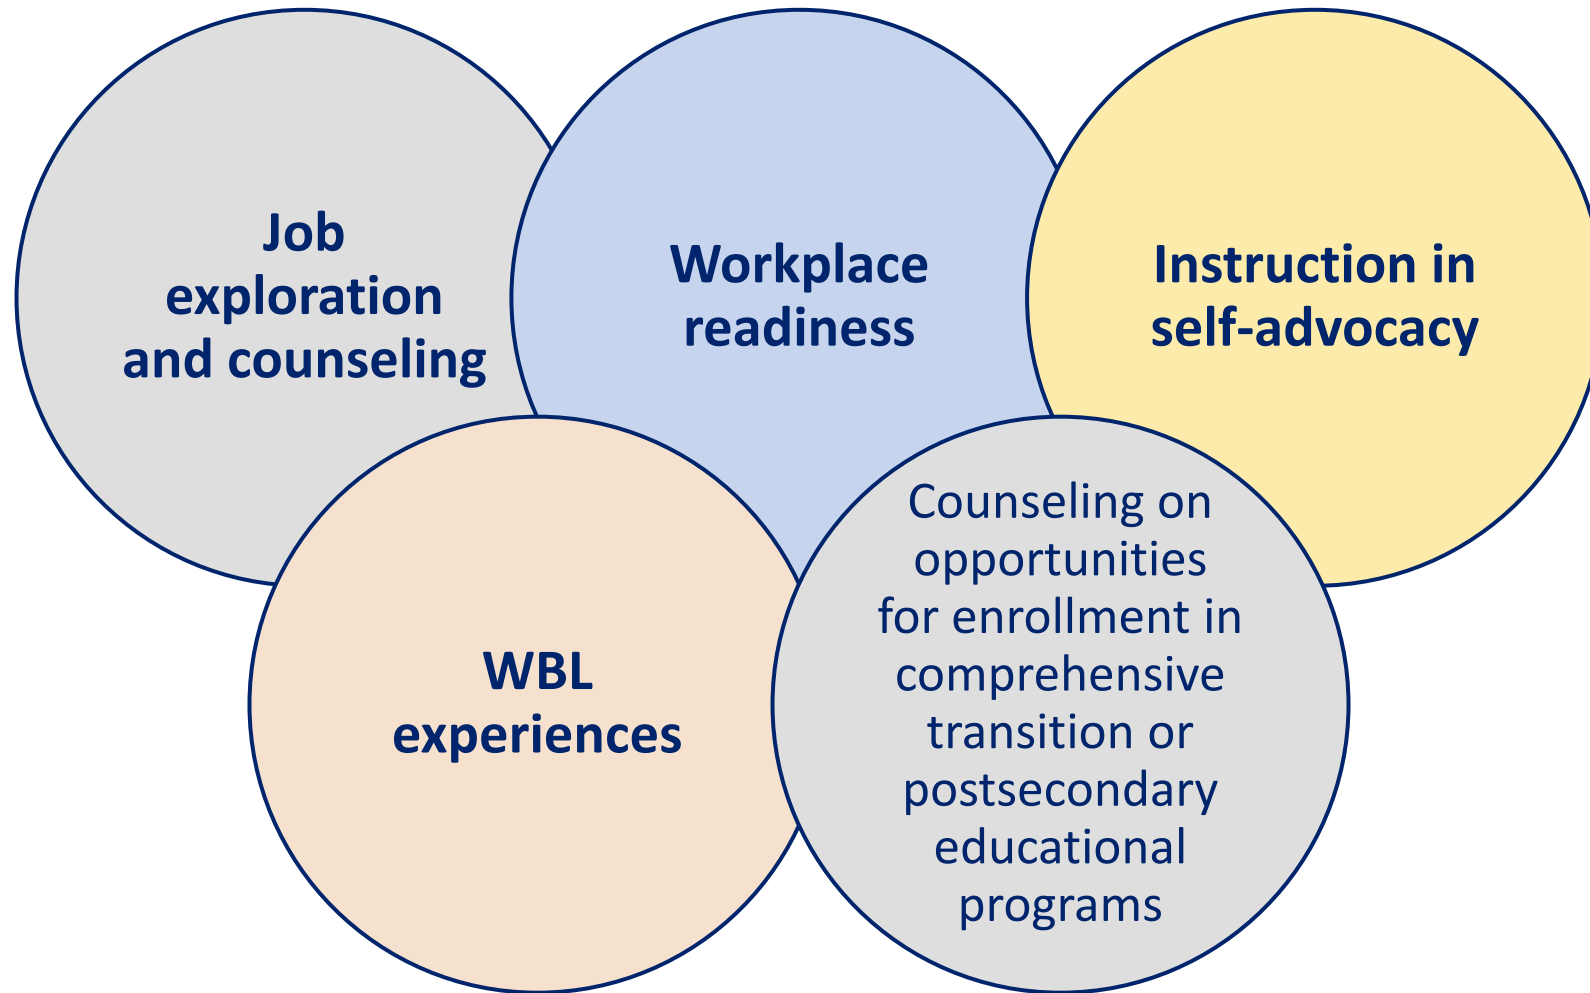

The diagram consists of two blue arrows pointing in opposite directions, one to the left and one to the right, which overlap in the center. The left arrow contains the text 'Potentially Eligible Student: May receive Pre-ETS'. The right arrow contains the text 'Eligible Student: May receive Pre-ETS AND/OR may receive vocational rehabilitation services needed to get a job'. What Makes a Successful WBL Program?

Successful WBL Programs

Successful WBL is most likely to happen when students are actively engaged in their own transition planning. To engage students, families, IEP Teams, VR professionals, and other support, professionals should:

- Set high expectations
- Use a person-centered planning approach
- Support the student's or youth's social and emotional learning
- Provide the student or youth with support to make their own decisions
- Counsel the student and their representative to make informed choices

Set High Expectations

To set high expectations and foster successful post-school outcomes for students with disabilities, all individuals concerned with students' education should:

- Establish a school-wide culture of high expectations
- Provide students with disabilities access to rigorous coursework
- Ensure students with disabilities have IEP goals that are aligned with the challenging academic content standards for the grade in which the student is enrolled and ensure that students with disabilities receive the specialized instruction, related services, and other supports they need to meaningfully access, be involved, and make progress in the general education curriculum
- Provide students with disabilities the opportunity to access Standards and Assessments
- Ensure educators have the tools and resources necessary to support success

Be Person-Centered

When developing a WBL program or site, planning is centered on the interests, strengths, skills, and needs of the student with disability.

Person-centered approaches:

- Include in the planning process individuals who have a deep knowledge of the student's academic and social history
- View the student as an individual, rather than as a diagnosis or disability
- Use everyday language in transition planning, rather than “professional jargon”
- Ensure goals are developed based on the student's unique strengths, interests, and capacities

Address Students' Social and Emotional Needs

Many of these opportunities can be integrated into the student's existing course of study. Specific strategies include:

- Role-playing: Schools can create opportunities for students with disabilities to practice appropriate social skills in a variety of contexts, including school-based, workplace, community, and postsecondary educational settings.
- Participation in social and emotional learning programs: A variety of specific social skill development programs exist that can help students acquire critical social skills.
- Positive school climate: Parents should be aware that a positive school climate is critical to helping students with disabilities develop strong social skills. For example, safe and supportive classrooms build on the student's strengths.

Provide the Student With Support to Make Their Own Decisions

Key characteristics of self-determination are the ability to:

- Speak for oneself (self-advocacy)
- Solve problems
- Set goals
- Make decisions
- Possess self-awareness
- Exhibit independence

Advancing High Quality WBL Programs—Checklists
